

The Streets of Adelaide

BORN
OF REFORM
1832 - 1836

By Dr Jeff Nicholas

A comprehensive historical tribute to the people involved in the establishment of Adelaide and the streets and squares named after them

- ❖ 3 volumes, 60 biographies, contains colour images
- ❖ Hardcover, boxed set, collector's item

The Reform Bill of 1832

- ❖ Britain's way of reducing the unrest which spilled in from Europe from the French Revolution through to the 1830s.
- ❖ Provided stimulus for:
 - electoral reform
 - legislative and socio-political change
 - establishment of enlightened liberal principles of freedom and democracy.

The Reform Bill of 1832

- ❖ The men and women behind the streets of Adelaide were proponents of many of ideas.

- ❖ A large number of them:
 - sat in the Reform Parliament
 - started the Reform Club in London
 - helped breathe life into Edward Gibbon Wakefield's concept of Systematic Colonisation.

The Reform Bill of 1832

- ❖ The new colony of South Australia became a template for the most advanced ideas of reform at the time.

- ❖ Most distinguished examples:
 - religious freedom
 - universal suffrage
 - separation of church and state
 - abolition of the penal system
 - the Torrens Title system of land transfer
 - model schools
 - three-tiered government and state responsibility for the poor and disadvantaged.

The Reform Club

South Australia

❖ The unrevealed history of South Australia

❖ An important contribution to South Australia's political and social history

❖ Establishes connection between the Reform Club and South Australia

Duke of Wellington

1769 - 1852

Next, with loose rein and careless canter view Our man of men, the prince of Waterloo; O'er the fi rm brow that hat as fi rmly prest, The fi rm shape rigid in the button'd vest; Within-the iron which the fire has proved, And the close Sparta of a mind unmoved!

Not his the wealth to some large natures lent, Divinely lavish, even where misspent.

That liberal sunshine of exuberant soul, Thought, sense, affection, warming up the whole;

The heat and affluence of a genial power, Rank in the weed as vivid in the flower;

Drill'd is each virtue, disciplined each fault; Warm if his blood-he reasons while he glows, Admit's the pleasure-ne'er the folly knows;

If for our Mars his snare had Vulcan set,
He had won the Venus, but escaped the net; His eye ne'er wrong, if circumscribed the sight,

Widen the prospect and it ne'er is right, Seen through the telescope of habit still,
States seem a camp, and all the world
- a drill.

Yet oh, how few his faults, how pure his mind, Beside his fellow-conquerors of mankind; How knightly seems the iron image, shown By Marlborough's tomb, or lost Napoleon's throne!

Cold if his lips, no smile of fraud they wear, Stern if his heart, still "Man" is graven there;

No guile- no crime his step to greatness made, No freedom trampled, and no trust betray'd; The eternal "I" was not his law- he rose Without one art that honour might oppose, And leaves a human, if a hero's name

To curb ambition while it lights to fame.

Baron Edward Bulwer Lytton
